OFFICERS ELECTED.

By the Educational Association at Bowling Green.

DROPPED A CANDIDATE.

Barksdale Hamlett, of Hopkinsville, Succeeds Mr. Henry Rhoads.

Bowling Green, Ky., June 22.—The most important business transacted by the Kentucky Educational Association was the election of officers. The contest for President was close. M. C. McKee, of Frankfort; Barksdale Hamlett, of Hopkinsville; and E. R. Crawford, of Bardonia, were placed in nomination. It was agreed that the candidate receiving the fewest votes should be dropped at the end of each ballot, which resulted in the dropping of Mr. Crawford at the end of the first ballot. On the second ballot, Mr. Hamlett was elected by a majority of seven votes.

M. C. McKee, of Frankfort; Miss Cora Wilson, of Frankfort, and H. H. Cherry, of Bowling Green, were elected Vice Presidents. P. W. Wilson, of Lexington, was elected Secretary, and I. H. Booth, of Olive Hill, Treasurer.

Winchester, Grayson Springs and Louisville extended invitations to the association to meet with them next year.

J. J. Glenn, of Madisonville, and James H. Garrett, of Cadiz, were appointed members of the campaign committee for the Second Congressional district.

The association put itself on record as favoring the county unit control of schools.

Mr. Walker cordially invites all farmers who care to discuss the clover and alfalfa question with Mr. Brand to call, as he will be pleased to give them any information at his command.

KENTUCKY CUTS RATES.

State Commission Order Will Save Shippers $1,800,000 a Year.

Frankfort, Ky., June 25.—The state railway commission last week issued an order for a general reduction of freight rates in Kentucky that will effect a saving of $1,800,000 a year to shippers. The cut in the case of the Louisville & Nashville is 25 per cent. The Illinois Central is also singled out for censure and is forbidden to charge more than the rate fixed for the Louisville and Nashville.

COUNTY JUDGE DECIDES.

Test Made By C. H. Campbell, Representing Chicago Portrait Company.

C. H. Campbell, representing a Chicago portrait company, who is canvassing this county with several assistants, taking orders for enlarged pictures, had the county attorney to arrest him Saturday to test the new revenue law imposing a license on picture enlarging houses who enlarge pictures and sell frames. County Judge Breathitt heard the case Saturday afternoon and held that Campbell and his associates were foreign manufacturers and under the interstate commerce law had a right to sell goods to be delivered in the future without the payment of a license. Campbell produced a decision of the supreme court in a similar case from North Carolina in 1903. Under this decision, the section of the new revenue law bearing on this business is held to be unconstitutional. The city ordinance along the same line is yet to be construed, as it is somewhat different from the state, law imposing a license on the occupation of the individual.

CIRCUIT COURT.

This is the Last Week of the June Term.

The case of the commonwealth against Joe Springfield and Charlie Layne, the negroes charged with shooting and wounding Ellihu Dougherty and Ames Hayden, several weeks ago, East of the city, was called yesterday. Both sides announced ready and the defendants elected to be tried separately. Layne's case was taken up first and a jury selected. The taking of testimony had not been finished when we went to press.

The jury in the case of Alex Dukes, charged with assault and battery, returned a verdict of guilty and fixed his fine at $25.

Ernest Wadkins and Herman Wiggins, charged with disturbing lawful assembly, were each fined $25 and costs.

The indictment against John Cheaney, charging him with shooting Duncan Veach, was dismissed, Cheaney having previously received a life sentence for the murder of Maud Ellis.

Bessie King was fined $25 on a charge of selling liquor without a license.

Same, k. b. h., fined $25.

Violet Baker, same, same.

This is the fourth week of the term and court will likely adjourn about Friday.

OCTOGENARIAN.

Had Been In the Asylum For Some Time.

W. H. Ham, an inmate of the Western Asylum, died at the institution Friday, aged eighty years. Death was due to exhaustion. He was sent to the asylum for treatment several years ago. The body was shipped to Bardwell for interment.

RESERVOIR LAKE IS FULL.

Heavy Rainfall Of Sunday Filled It to Overflowing.

RAN OVER THE DAM.

All Floating Logs and Trash Carried Off the Surface.

The heavy rains of Saturday and Sunday filled the new reservoir lake, covering 42 acres, to overflowing and the top was cleaned of floating logs and trash, which were carried over the dam. One or two small leaks appeared in the stone work of the dam, but they can be easily stopped. The water is now from 10 to 20 feet deep and the reservoir is a vast lake with enough water to remove every possible fear of a summer shortage. The lake was completed about two weeks ago and the freshet could not have come at a more opportune time. The lake is now ready to be stocked with fish.

CHURCH DIFFERENCES

Lead to the Resignation of Pastor.

Rev. P. B. Grant, pastor of the Salem Baptist church, near Elmo, has resigned, and moved away last week. His last sermon, it is said, was a spirited and somewhat sensational reply to a request for his resignation, presented to him by a committee. A vote was taken and the church sustained the action of the committee.

Floating Balloons.

The big show window of the clothing and shoe department of J. H. Anderson & Co.'s store has attracted hundreds of gazers. They turned loose in the window about 150 inflated balloons and they were kept in motion by electric fans. It is one of the best advertisements seen here for many years.

Preachers In Demand.

There are just now several very important Baptist pulpits vacant. There are men worthy of them. Yes, but their important fields need them, too. The cry comes from many directions for more ministers of the highest fitness. Consecrated, cultured men, trained to preach and lead is a crying need.—Baptist Argus.

DOUBLE.

BY J. A. TITANY.

He was only a double so far as the name was concerned—you would never have mistaken one man for the other had you seen them together. But that was what made it all the more annoying for Fred Wetherby—our Wetherby.

Whenever he picked up a morning paper he expected to find his name figuring there as the hero of some villainous brawl, as the leader of some desperate gang of hobos or as the most wanted man at police headquarters—and then, he would say, when talking about it, "these papers seem to take a positive delight in rubbing it in by coming out the next day with a repetition of the story, and adding that the Fred Wetherby referred to is not the distinguished journalist of that name."

"I really believe I've seen and heard the last of that fellow," Wetherby said to me one evening, over an after-dinner cigar. "I ran across him this morning, and he had the impudence to strike me for a dime—the price of a drink."

"I'd be glad to give you 10,000 dimes, confound you!" I said, "if you'd be good enough to go away and hang yourself. Three days in the week I see my name in print through some of your blackguardism, and the other three days the papers make it worse by their capriciousness."

"Say, mister," says Wetherby, "is that a go?"

"Is what a go?" I asked.

"A 'tousand dollars to hang myself!"

"Yes it is," I said.

"Gimme a hundred, boss, and s'elp me, I shinnyp up de pike, and de cops of dis burg 'll never clasp deir blinkers on me again."

"People like you," I answered, "never stay away. They always come back."

"I tek my dyin' aff-davey niver to flash me myn in de town agin, longest day. I lives, an' y give me a hundred, boss. Ain't got no special use fer this particular lay-out of bricks and mortar."

Say, you, I'm a bad lot; but mebbe if you h'd had my draggin' up you wouldn't ha' bin a helluvasite better. I didn't pinch yer name. Dey tagged me wid it, 'fore I wuz old enough to squeal. But if it's wort a hundred to see de last o' me, I'm yer man; and yer kin s'it me winduppe any time yer catches me here again, after two hours—an' no kick comin' from nobdy."

"Well, I suppose I was a fool, but I gave the blackguard the hundred dollars; and he actually cried. Said he was going to make a fresh start, and he'd remember me to his dying day."

"Good-by, I said. 'I've no hard feelings. I wish you luck. Maybe if my folks had been like yours I should have been a bigger blackguard than you."

"You couldn't be dat, guv'nor," he said—probably with a touch of that pride that spees humility."

Wetherby's disreputable namesake kept his word, and for the next few years Fred enjoyed himself in the undisturbed pursuit of his work and the possession of his good name—no longer blazoned forth in the local press as the perpetrator of atrocious outrages against the peace and good morals of the community.

Then came the Spanish war, and although he had only been married about a year, Wetherby enlisted in the ranks, for the purpose of obtaining material for his literary labors.

For some time we heard nothing about him, and then came the shocking news that he had been killed by a stray bullet received while engaged in scouting duty.

The war had been over five years and to me, as to many others who had known him even more intimately than I, Fred Wetherby had become but a name, a pleasant memory, growing gradually less distinct and aggressive. Then one night on Lexington avenue, feeling a hand laid on my shoulder, I turned about to find myself standing face to face with the man of whom I had thought so long dead.

"Well, Everard," he said, "feels good to be back again."

"Wetherby! It isn't your ghost?"

"No—it's myself; almost—I shall be quite myself after a while."

I asked, suddenly grabbing hold of his arm, as he started to turn down towards his old home.

"Going home?"

"Home?" I echoed, blankly.

"Yes," he said, simply. "I haven't seen my wife yet."

"Did you send her word that you were coming?"

"No, I didn't; and if it isn't asking too much, would you mind going up to the house before me and breaking the news of my return to Nita?"

"Well, here's my place. Better come in and have a smoke, and talk things over first."

I led the way into the library, and when we had lighted our cigars I asked him to tell me some of his adventures—I wanted time to think.

Wetherby said that soon after landing in Cuba he discovered his double among a batch of recruits that came to headquarters, and the man was drafted to his regiment.

The fellow had improved in appearance and seemed to have reformed in every way—really looked as if he were trying hard to become a creditable member of society.

"I did all I could to encourage him," Wetherby continued, "and on several occasions I had opportunity of doing him little acts of kindness, rendered possible by my means, in the hard conditions of the field."

"One day I was called to the hospital, and when I got there I found Wetherby just dying from a bullet wound."

"I thought I'd like to say good-by to you, Mr. Wetherby," he said, "an' let you see fer yerself that I ain't foolin' ye, this time. Ye needn't be afraid of my ever showin' up agin in de old place. I'm a clean-sure gonor dis time, all right, all right."

"Don't say that, my poor fellow," I said. "I sincerely hope you will get better, and live for many years."

"No, it's all over with F. W.; I guess it's de best thing. But I hopes yer don't bear me no malice fer all de harm I done yer, back yonder. Good-by, sir."

"Well, I stayed with him so long as I could, but at last I was compelled to leave him; and when I saw him again he was dead."

"And it wasn't long before I was brought down myself, by exposure, lack of proper food and the abominable sanitary conditions of the country."

"My case was considered serious, and from the regimental hospital I was removed to Havana, where I developed brain fever. When that had run its course it left me suffering from a mental affliction, for which they detained me in an asylum."

"In the rapid movement of events, the sickness and death of so many of my comrades, I was lost sight of by my regiment, and in the hospital I was known only by a number. The greater part of the time is a blank to me; but two weeks ago I was discharged cured, and made straight for home."

"So," I said, as he finished, "it was your scapegrace namesake who died, eh?"

"Why, certainly! You never thought it was I, did you?"

"Well, you see, the newspapers just announced that 'Fred Wetherby, of the 1st Pennsylvania regiment, had died from a bullet wound, received while on scouting duty.' Many people thought it was you."

"But you didn't believe it, Dick?" he asked wistfully, as though I had been telling him that he was suspected of a terrible crime.

"It doesn't make much difference what I believed, Fred," I answered, slowly; "but there are some people—"

"Not Nita—no! My God, you don't mean that? Nita never believed that I was dead?"

"Yes, your wife believed it, Fred. How could she help it?"

"Well, the dear little woman, she'll be overjoyed when she finds that I'm alive and well."

I took his hand, turned my face away, and asked:

"Are you sure of that, Fred?"

"Sure of it?" he echoed. "I wish I were as sure of Heaven! What makes you doubt it?"

"Can you bear the truth, Wetherby?"

"I can bear anything but your doubts of Nita's constancy."

"I'm sorry, but I'm afraid

Fred."

"You don't mean that Nita's dead?"

"No, and yes. Dead to you. She waited five years, though everybody else had given you up. This morning she was married to Dr. Holden."

Wetherby sprawled forward with his arms on the table and his head buried in his arms. He sat that way a long time. I was at most beginning to think that he had died from the shock of the news he had just heard, when he looked up at me with a smile that I couldn't understand.

"Got a drink of brandy about, boss?" he asked.

He laughed and chuckled as he poured the liquor out into the glass that I gave him.

"So I fooled you, all right, all right, eh? Well, here's to you. I was gon' up there to try an' fool the widdy; but I guess I might get kicked out, if there's another husband on hand; so my best lay is to mosey. Just one or two little commissions I got to do fer Mr. Wetherby before I hits der ties."

"Here, Wetherby," I said, "what kind of hobo talk is this you're giving me?"

"Wot sort o' talk d'yer want? 'Speet a feller like me to spout Greek?"

"No, but you can talk like a gentleman."

"Well, I kin when I wants to fool a man; but I'm on der level now. When Mr. Wetherby died down there in Cuby, he give me this gold watch, and he sez to you to take it; and dis gold locket and der di'mon ring he sez as de widdy wud be glad to git. So mebbe you'll giv' 'em to her—to save me a trip up to the house; an' don't you forget to tell her that it was all right. The other husband's dead enough—saw him die meself; and he went to crows' meat long ago. Don't mind ef I do tek anudder swig at der brandy, mister. It's good stuff."

"So you're Wetherby, the hobo?" I asked.

"Yes, dat's just wot I am; but I run der con into yer in great shape dere fer half an hour. Yer t'ought I wuz de milder fellow."

"I did, sure enough," I answered.

"Well, an' now yer satisfied dat yer wuz wrong, ain't yer? y'd go on the stand and swear it 'fore jedge an' jury, wudn't ye?"

"Yes, I believe I wud, if I said."

"Then swear it, use er argylin'! Dere ain't nothin' more to be said; an' it's me fer der woods."

"That was the last I ever saw or expect to see of Fred Wetherby. Sometimes I run across things in the magazines, signed with a certain nom de plume, that I am satisfied he has written—principally stories and sketches of life in western Australia."

But if ever I start a religious sect of my own, I'm going to make a new saint's calendar, and enroll Fred Wetherby as the patron saint of liars, who lie to make this world fit for the other folks to live in."

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

The date for the western golf amateur championship, to be held on the 22nd Echo Links, at St. Louis, and originally set for June 18-23, has been changed to September 4-7. The change has the approval of all western golf enthusiasts who have always recognized the force of the argument that a championship should be held toward the close of a season, rather than at the beginning, as it should be played after the players have passed through the preliminary tournaments, have had the advantage of the steady influence of the minor competitions, and, presumably, are at their best. This principle was ignored by the United States Golf association this year, Walter Travis and others arguing for an early tournament. So the dates were set for July 10-14. Travis and the others who follow the winter and early spring circuit will have an advantage over players whose practice can be taken only after the April rains subside. The Western Golf association tourney has preceded the national event for the past three years, but this now has seemed inadvisable. It is probable that the luster of the championship will be dimmed by the absence of one of the game's brightest stars, Chandler Egan, the national and western champion, will be unable to be present, owing to business affairs. Egan has not even been out on the links this year, and has positively stated that he will not defend his title this season. The title will, therefore, devolve on some lesser light, for, without doubt Chandler Egan is the greatest golfer on this continent, in the amateur division. George Lyons beat him in the Olympic tournament, but it was only after Chandler had worn himself out by playing in tournament after tournament previously. Few believe Lyons could again defeat Egan. Eben Byers, Dr. Fredericks, Walter Egan and W. C. Fowles, Jr., are some of the stars who should figure in the later rounds of play at the championship contest, and they will show forms just next to that of Chandler Egan.

One of the greatest evils in present-day minor base ball—that of the substitution of imperfect baseballs by players with intent to minimize the chances of defeat—will be stamped out by the device invented by President O'Brien, of the American association. In his desire to remove this evil and promote clean baseball, President O'Brien devoted much of his thought as to how his umpires might be in possession of the balls that were in play. It is customary for the home team, which furnishes the balls for a game, to keep the supply in a handbag on its bench, and the umpire is forced to signal for balls to be put in play from time to time. After the first two or three innings close to a dozen balls have been in play, and so discolored that substitution of "pink" balls is made possible. If all balls put in play passed through the hands of the umpire it would not be so bad, but this is not always the case as the men on the coaching lines frequently carry bad balls. The result of President O'Brien's thought on the subject was the invention of a ball box 27 inches in length, four inches wide and four inches deep. There is a funnel on the top and at one end of the box into which balls can be dropped, and at the other end, which is open, there is a catch that holds the balls in until it is turned to release just when the umpire wants them. There is an opening the entire length of the box, so that the balls can be seen plainly. When a game begins the home team furnishes the umpire with one of these boxes filled with new balls, and he can either let it lie on the ground near him or hang it on the grand stand or players' bench near by. The box holds nine balls, and there is no way that one can be played out except through the open end. Players or the umpire may drop the balls that are returned into the box after the game starts, but no one would think of substituting a "pink" ball, because there is no way of calculating just when the balls are put in play, and an imperfect one might be taken out while the home team was at bat instead of the other fellows. The box, it is called, is a simple hardwood affair that is light and strong, and will stand considerable wear and tear.

How to Break Up a Cold.

It may be a surprise to many to learn that a severe cold can be completely broken up in one or two days' time. To do this, however, prompt action is necessary. The first symptoms of a cold are a dry, loud cough, a profuse watery discharge from the nose, and a thin, white coating on the tongue. When Chamberlain's cough remedy is taken every hour on the first appearance of the symptoms, it counteracts the effect of the cold and restores the system to a healthy condition within a day or two. For sale by L. L. Elgin and Anderson & Fowler, up-to-date druggists at Hopkinsville.

Mrs. Sallie Bernuch died at Richmond after long illness.

Unknown Friends.

There are many people who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with splendid results, but who are unknown because they have hesitated about giving a testimonial of their experience for publication. These people, however, are none the less friends of this remedy. They have done much toward making it a household word by their personal recommendations to friends and neighbors. It is a good medicine to have in the home and is widely known for its cures of diarrhoea and all forms of bowel trouble. Sold by L. L. Sore Muscles.

Prominent athletes throughout the country find that the best treatment for sore muscles after severe exercise or hard work of any kind, is a hot bath at bed time, which opens the pores. This should immediately be followed with an application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, vigorously rubbed into the skin. This liniment removes all stiffness and soreness and has become a favorite remedy, and it acts promptly and keeps the muscles in excellent condition. For sale by L. L. The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure, or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. The kidneys are the great filters of the blood and if they are allowed to become diseased, the blood will break down and waste away by cell. Kidney troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickly by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It corrects impurities to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

RUSSIA'S PREMIER

WITTE'S SUCCESSOR AS HEAD OF GOVERNMENT.

M. Goremykin's Career—Long an Enemy of the Deposed Premier—Said to Be a Weak Man.

The news in America of the downfall of Witte and his conservative policy for Russia has caused widespread interest, for the Russian diplomat quite won the admiration of the American people by his able and dignified conduct during the Russo-Japanese peace negotiations. Witte's overthrow is accepted in Russia as a victory for the reactionaries, and people in this country are asking what kind of a man is to be his successor. M. Goremykin, the new premier, is not only regarded as a reactionary but the general opinion is that he is not equal to the task of facing the coming crisis. His election to the premiership has created amazement. He has long been an untiring enemy of De Witte. He is largely interested in the oil business, and in fact, as a milk dealer supplies most of the milk used in St. Petersburg, and has been dubbed "The Milk Dealer."

Goremykin is considered a mediocre man and is insignificant appearance as well as capacity. He wears side whiskers and looks like an English butler. While for some time he has been called a liberal, it was only in contrast with such men as Von Plehve and M. Sipiaguine, reactionary leaders, both of whom were assassinated. He began his career in the ministry of justice, becoming assistant minister, from which post he was called in 1895 to a position of the dowager empress, to become minister of the interior. The student troubles were just beginning, and Goremykin proved so lacking in energy in suppressing them that he was removed and M. Sipiaguine given his place. Sipiaguine was a victim of his own harsh energy, for he was killed by a terrorist bomb.

M. GOREMYKIN.

While Goremykin was minister of the interior he had made a report to the emperor to the effect that the stories of famine and suffering which were said to exist in certain provinces were untrue. De Witte, who then was minister of the interior, saw through the deception and demanded documents to prove that the conditions in the interior were as bad as they had been represented to be. The minister was so overcome that the emperor himself brought him a glass of water.

Goremykin, dismissed from office, turned his back on De Witte. He joined the Von Plehve faction, and was a part of the cabal which overthrew De Witte as minister of finance in 1904. He was rewarded with the chairmanship of the agrarian commission. When De Witte became premier he removed his old enemy from office.

The wheel of political fortune has turned again and once more De Witte is down and Goremykin is up. De Witte, unquestionably the biggest man in public life here, goes out unwept and uncomplained, and the reactionaries, who hate the liberals and who distrust him. Yet even today it is predicted that when the next great crisis comes the emperor will be forced to summon De Witte from his retirement.

The London Daily Telegraph attacks M. Goremykin as a bureaucrat of bureaucracy, and as the high priest of pigeon holes. Heaviness, cunning and intolerance are his main characteristics. He dabbled in company peddling, for which he might have been prosecuted had it not been for the late Von Plehve, who refused to move against him. His appointment is calculated to fill the friends of Russia with greatest apprehension. He is the dull observer can discern that a fatal step has been taken and that serious consequences must be faced.

Expressing an Opinion.

Clyde Fitch was discussing a rather tiresome drama. "It was such a drama," he said, "that a French playwright read the other day before a committee of the French Society of Comedy."

"As the author plodded through his second act he heard an odd sound, and looked up to see a gentleman asleep and breathing heavily."

"'Monseigneur!' he cried, 'monseigneur! wake up! Please remember, monseigneur, that I am reading this play to the committee in order to get a verdict. How can a gentleman who is asleep give an opinion?'"

"But the other answered, gravely: 'Sleep is an opinion.'"

THE LIPS.

Of White Sisters Meet Lips of the Colored Elders.

New York, June 21.—A novel spectacle of colored elders kissing white sisters was witnessed at the general conference of the Church of God, in session in tabernacle No. 3, Hudson avenue near DeKalb avenue, Brooklyn. It was the ceremony known as the "holy kiss."

Several hundred attended the conference. The church draws no color line, and about half of those present were colored. Bishop Marsh, the head of the local branch of the church, said that in the last year hundreds of white converts had been made in this State. The increase has been so large that he has found it necessary to ordain five new elders.

Many of those present had taken only the first steps leading to admission to the church—the washing of their feet by an elder. The next step was the "holy kiss."

One by one the white converts pressed their lips to those of the white and colored elders and then the colored converts did the same.

The "holy kiss" is not the only novel feature of the "Church of God." The members have a Prophet, and it is necessary to have the utmost faith in this leader. His word is law in everything appertaining to the church. The followers must contribute 10 per cent of their earnings for the support of the Prophet.

It is said that the church is operating many business enterprises throughout the country, and that it expects soon to concentrate these enterprises in Beleville, Va., where a "Holy City" will be established.

Eye Injured.

Mr. J. L. Harris, of this county, while running a threshing engine Saturday, had an eye seriously injured by the bursting of a glass gauge. Drs. Edwards and Harned dressed the wound and Mr. Harris will not, it is hoped, lose the sight of the injured eye altogether, though the sight will be somewhat impaired. Mr. Harris has been running engines for 23 years and this was his first accident.

The State College of Kentucky,

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Agricultural and Mechanical (State College) of Kentucky offers the following courses of study: vit, Agricultural, Horticultural, Chemical, Biological, Mathematical, Physical, Normal School, Classical, Mechanical Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Civil Engineering, and Mining Engineering, each of which extends over four years and leads to a degree. Post graduate studies are also provided, leading to a master's degree. Each course of study is organized under a separate faculty. The general faculty number nearly fifty professors and instructors.

County appointees receive free tuition, room rent in the dormitories, fuel and light, and if they remain ten months, traveling expenses.

The laboratories and museums are large, well equipped, comprehensive and modern.

Graduates from the several courses of study readily find excellent positions and liberal remuneration. The demand is largely in excess of the ability of the College to supply. The matriculation for the last year was, including Summer school, 815.

Specialists under the necessary number of assistants have charge of each department of natural science. Summer schools are provided for pedagogy, engineering, instruction in science and in arts.

The State College of Kentucky, though bearing hitherto the title of "college," is the only institution in the Commonwealth doing, in any proper sense, university work.

The completion of the College home for young women provides facilities for good board and lodging. It is equipped with all modern conveniences, including bath rooms and room for physical culture. It is heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

An opportunity is thus afforded to young women of obtaining a thorough education in classics, modern language, literature, science, mathematics, logic, metaphysics, history, and political economy.

No other institution in the State offers advantages for education of women at all comparable to those offered by the State College of Kentucky.

The Normal Department will be on a better footing than ever heretofore. Last year's largely increased attendance, with the unprecedented growth of the Summer Normal School, both indicate that an era of prosperity surpassing that of all previous years has opened for the Normal Department of the State College.

New York Life.

Hopkinsville, Ky., April 30th, 1906.

Mr. Walter F. Garnett, Agent,

New York Life Insurance Co., City.

Dear Sir:—

It gives me pleasure to acknowledge receipt of statement of optional settlement on 20-Payment Life Policy, No. 223,593, for $1,500.00, issued at age 35, with premium of $22.50, taken out with you Apr. 29, '96. After having been insured for 20 years, I am offered a paid up policy for $1,500 and a cash dividend of $406.88, or the total value may be withdrawn in cash—$1,215.88, (which is more than I have paid in the 20 years) or a fully paid up policy payable at my death for $2,219.00.

The cash settlement of $1,215.88 is equal to Term Insurance at $12.87 per $1,000 and an investment of the balance of premiums with 5 1/2 per cent, compound interest for twenty years. This showing is certainly a creditable one for the New York Life, and I will be pleased to give you my application for $1,000 on the Ordinary plan.

Yours very truly, C. E. WEST.

Southwest

The Land of BIG CROPS and PROSPERITY.

Are you making as much off your farm as you ought? No doubt you are making all you CAN. The trouble is the land costs too much. It takes too much money to buy a big farm, and so you are trying to make a living on a small farm, or perhaps you are renting one and paying a good share of what you raise, in rent. Wouldn't it be better to go where the price of good land is so little that you can own a big farm—where every acre of the ground is working for you and all you raise is paying you good profits?

There are thousands of acres of fertile land in the Southwest along the line of the Cotton Belt Route that can be bought for from $3 to $10 an acre. This land is increasing in value each year.

See the Southwest at Small Cost.

A trip to the Southwest would convince you that your best interests lay in settling there. The trip can be made at very little expense. On the first and third Tuesdays of each month you can purchase a round trip ticket to any point in the Southwest or via the Cotton Belt Route at very low rates. Stopovers will be allowed for you to examine any locality you are interested in. Write at once for free copies of books describing this wonderful country and for full information about cost of tickets.

RESTORED HIS VOICE.
Deaf and Dumb Impositor Comes to Grief.

A young fellow named Charles Thorne was run in Friday night by Lieut. Booth Morris. He carried a petition setting forth that he was deaf and dumb, and a poor young man trying to get an education, etc. When arrested his pockets were filled with petitions numerously signed by those who had made donation of from 10 to 50 cents. The names showed that he had worked Glasgow and other towns. Officer Morris took him to the station and after working with him for half an hour succeeded in restoring Thorne's voice and he spent the rest of the night cursing and swearing in a cell. The next day he had cooled off and when arraigned for trial pleaded guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct and Judge Brasher gave him $21 or 21 days on the streets. He surprised the court by pulling out various bills from secret pockets until he had counted out the money. He caught the first train out of town after having his "official documents" returned to him. He could still hear and talk when last seen.

HUCKSTERS MUST PAY
But Country People Can Retail Their Own Produce.

The new license ordinance, published last week, did not contain the license for hucksters, or resellers of marketing and country produce from wagons. This license was fixed at $10 a year. The ordinance will not prohibit a grower or producer from selling his own products. The ordinance will be published in time to take effect July 1st.
